

ABSTRACT

A user interface device is customized to a storage medium having records stored thereon. The user interface device has user input regions identified by respective symbols, and, operatively associated with the respective input regions, respective computer instructions for generating command signals for selecting respective records by controlling at least one respective function of a remote target device.